

Privacy

If the landlord wants to enter the property, they must let you know at least 24 hours beforehand in writing.

Even if you don't give them permission, the landlord may still be allowed to enter the property to:

- inspect the property
- carry out routine repairs or maintenance
- inspect smoke alarms or safety switches
- show the property to prospective buyers or tenants.

Unless you give them permission to, the landlord cannot enter on a Sunday, public holiday, or before 8am or after 6pm on any other day.

The landlord can only enter the property to inspect it once every 3 months.
